Re: Petition for Declaratory Ruling filed by the Retail Industry Leaders Association
(CG Docket No. 02-278)

To whom it may concern:

The American Financial Services Association (“AFSA”) welcomes the opportunity to comment on the Petition for Declaratory Ruling (“Petition”) filed by the Retail Industry Leaders Association (“RILA”) requesting that the Federal Communications Commission (“FCC”) clarify certain aspects of the Telephone Consumer Protection Act (“TCPA”), and in particular the prior written consent rules that became effective October 16, 2013. We request that the FCC declare expeditiously that the TCPA rules effective October 16, 2013, do not apply to isolated, immediate, one-time responses to consumer-initiated requests for text offers (“on demand texts”).

AFSA is the national trade association for the consumer credit industry, protecting access to credit and consumer choice. Its more than 350 members include consumer and commercial finance companies, auto finance/leasing companies, mortgage lenders, mortgage servicers, credit card issuers, industrial banks and industry suppliers. Like the retailers discussed in the Petition, AFSA members may use on demand text offers to meet their customer's increased expectations for value, personalization, and convenience.

On demand texts are only sent as a one-time, immediate response to a consumer-initiated text request. For example, consumers may see a call to action display, such as “text ‘lease’ to 12-345 for a special offer.” If interested, consumers text the word “lease” to the number provided. Consumers then receive a near instant text response containing the desired offer.

I. Sending a one-time, on demand text in response to a consumer's specific request does not violate the TCPA.

AFSA agrees with RILA that the FCC could not have intended for the new written consent rules that became effective October 16, 2013 to apply to consumer-initiated on demand texts because these texts are: “(1) proactively initiated by the consumer, not a telemarketer, (2) isolated, one-time only messages sent immediately in response to a consumer's specific request, and (3) contain only the specific information requested by the consumer.”¹

Sending a one-time, on demand text in response to a consumer's specific request does not constitute “initiating” a call for TCPA purposes. Neither does sending a one-time on demand text in response to a consumer's specific request constitute an “advertisement” or “telemarketing” for TCPA purposes. Clarifying that on demand texts may be made without prior written consent is consistent with the purpose and intent of the TCPA. As the Petition notes, “Because one-time, responsive, on demand texts in no way impinge on a consumer's privacy, and instead are a direct response providing what the consumer specifically requested, this clarification will in no way undermine the congressional intent of the TCPA.”² The TCPA rules are intended to prevent consumers from receiving intrusive and unwanted telemarketing calls. On demand texts are not intrusive, but on the contrary are desired, requested communications.

II. Clarification is necessary to eliminate the high risk of frivolous class action lawsuits.

Given the increasing number of frivolous and costly TCPA class action lawsuits, the FCC should explicitly state what is obvious – that a company should be able to provide the information specifically requested by a consumer without being subject to TCPA litigation.

Plaintiffs' attorneys see dollar signs with every potential TCPA case. In several TCPA class actions, companies settled for millions of dollars. Each class action member only received a few dollars, while the attorneys walked away with millions.³ For example, Bank of America recently entered into a $32 million settlement with a class of 7.7 million individuals based on alleged violations of the TCPA.⁴ Without conceding any violation of the TCPA, the bank agreed not to oppose any request from plaintiffs' counsel for attorneys' fees up to $8 million. The settlement will provide less than $5 to each plaintiff if every single person submits a claim (with the exception of seven named class representatives who receive $2,000 each). Instead of receiving compensation from class action litigation, consumers will experience rising costs as businesses struggle to make up the massive legal fees incurred during TCPA litigation.

The lack of clarity, combined with penalties of up to $1500 per violation of the TCPA, has provided plaintiffs' attorneys with fodder for lawsuits that enrich the attorneys rather than compensate their clients. Hundreds of TCPA class actions seeking multi-millions of dollars have been filed in recent years, and their number continues to climb. TCPA lawsuits were up 116 percent in September 2013 compared to September 2012. To demonstrate the number of TCPA lawsuits, we have included an appendix with a partial list of TCPA case law available on the TCPAlaw.com site. Even when companies prevail, the cost of defending a TCPA class action most often exceeds $100,000, which may be devastating for small and mid-size companies.

III. Conclusion

AFSA requests that the FCC make the narrow declaration that obtaining prior express written consent is not necessary when responding to a consumer with an on demand text. We look forward to working with the FCC on this Petition. Please contact me by phone, 202-466-8616, or e-mail, bhimpler@afsamail.org, with any questions.

⁵ TCPALaw.com originally began in 1996 as a repository of research materials and case law for litigants and attorneys. It slowly evolved with news, a slip reporter service, and on-line databases for tracking defendant activities. It is now the number one source for research and support of TCPA litigation. It has been recommended to litigants by the FCC as a resource, and counts many state legislators' offices and state attorneys' general offices as subscribers.
